Welcome

OXFORD University registered one of their most notable victories last Saturday (Nov 5) when they defeated the touring Romanians 26-16, many of whom will today (i.e. Nov 12) be stepping out at Twickenham against England. With just under a month to go until the Varsity Match, the Dark Blues have now strung together an impressive series of results, with only the two defeats, to Bedford and Neath.

Beginning here at the Rec today, the University enter the toughest phase of their season, with the prestigious Major Stanley's XV fixture on Wednesday and then Leicester, also at Iffley Road, a week today. After last year's 21-8 defeat by Bath at home, the University are hoping to continue their run of good form and catch the champions cold: they have no shortage of confidence and skills in the backs, whilst the pack demonstrated against the Romanians that they can compete effectively.

The Dark Blues bring with them just the one international this year, the Canadian Gareth Rees, but the form of some of their other players may see them pushing for international honours in the future. Watch out for the Irish wingers, Innes Gary and Tyrone Howe, while the form of Spencer Bromley in the centre has been outstanding. The positive and imaginative attitude which the University have displayed in their rugby this term makes this match a most exciting prospect.
